WHICH ARE THE SNOBBISH WOMEN?

"Do I think woman who work for a living are degraded?" said Mrs. Kate Grantham Wells, repeating in an astonished tone the question of a caller. "Of course, I believe nothing of the kind."

"Well, I knew that," said her caller, laughing, "but what do you believe?" For, as everyone knows, what Mrs. Wells says about women is worthy of close attention.

"Why, we all have to work for a living."

Every woman does in one way or another. Of course, there are some idle, good-for-nothing men. But there is hardly a woman who does nothing for her living.

Well, but I refer to professional women."

"Professional women," said Mrs. Wells, almost disdainfully, "now do not get me angry. What do you mean by professional women? If you mean girls who work in town as bookkeepers, office girls, or girls who stand behind the counter, or women in the law, ministry, or journalism, I think you had better say 'women who are paid.' A girl who is a bookkeeper is just as liable to be invited into the best society as anyone, provided she is a decent ladylike. If she is coarse, no unwomanly, she cannot expect to be invited; but it is not because she is a bookkeeper; in fact that has nothing whatever to do about it. It is simply because she is unrefined and unladylike. As for women in law, medicine and the ministry, there are many who are no more worthy of their professional titles and privileges than hundreds of other educated women. And they are always particular not to have their names mentioned without the accompanying 'Rev.' or 'M. D.', which is all very well in a professional way."

"As a trade mark, I suppose."

"Yes exactly," said Mrs. Wells. "But simply because the title has been granted to them by some institution is no reason that they are any better than any other people. In fact, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who is welcome in every public place, more, and is better fitted to preach than ten of the average ministers. Again Mrs. Richards of the Institute of Technology has not yet been granted the professor. She undoubtedly will in time, but even now she knows more than a dozen others who have been known as 'Professors' for years."

Well, do you think that the women of means who live at home are inclined to look down upon working women?" asked the caller.

"I tell you they are all working women," said Mrs. Wells, emphatically. "You can hardly find a 'rich' woman, as you would probably say, in this city, who does not work harder than the average of those who may be called laboring people, but they work every minute of the day. It is almost impossible to find a woman to take up any new charitable work. They all have their hands full of it. The working-women often say in a bitter way, that the so-called 'rich' women sit at home with folded hands, while they toil and do the drudgery. The truth is, it is the working women who draw the distinctions. Go down into the North end and you will find the classes as distinctly marked among the women themselves as the steps of a flight of stairs. The woman who takes in sewing is a little more respectable than the one who takes in washing, and accordingly looks down from her pedestal. But she also looks up to the woman of the next grade above her."

"It appears to be hard to decide whether the snobbishness really exists at the North or West end."

"Ah, you see the point!" exclaimed Mrs. Wells. "I did not exactly want to say it, but you see for yourself. The women who are paid in money for their services put themselves down by looking up to those who labor at home, full as much as they are already looked down upon by others."

The women of this country, it appears, then, are as distinctly divided into castes and classes as the women of India, if one can follow Mrs. Wells' statements to their climax.

"We want to break down these lines of caste and classes which exist among our women," said Mrs. Wells. The women who are paid are mainly to blame. They should appreciate the fact that the woman who does charity work, or the woman who is teaching her children how to become true men and women is earning her living just as much as the woman who is paid in money for every bit of work done."

"How are these difficulties to be remedied? It seems a very deep and complicated problem," said the caller.

"It is, indeed," said Mrs. Wells, earnestly, "and can only be rectified by the united and sympathetic endeavors of all concerned. The work must begin at both ends of the line, and all must remember that a woman can be just as refined and ladylike in one occupation as in another, and that while she is womanly she is just as good as anybody else. And it should also be remembered that an uncultured, unrefined, coarse woman is as undesirable in one place as another. All work must be done by some one and therefore it is not the kind of work which should mark the lines."

SOME PERTINENT FACTS.

Who helps to pay taxes?
Who supports your charities?
Who aids in supporting the poor?
Who responds liberally to every call of need?

It is largely your local merchant. Why, then, patronize itinerant vendors of doubtful responsibility, who sell doubtful goods, who pocket the proceeds of their sales, and take your money out of town?

If you get what you buy, do you get any more than your local merchants will give you?

If you don't get what you buy, what chance of redress have you with outside vendors?

Who grants you credit when hard winters and hard times use up your ready money? Is it the local merchant or the itinerant?

Who is it that has proven his integrity by long years of faithful business methods among you?

Purchasing public, these are pertinent questions. They bear upon the times, and when importuned to buy of outside, irresponsible parties, think of them, and act as you would like others to act toward you under similar circumstances.

CANADA AND THE CHOLERA.

Many people in the United States have felt that the chief danger of the introduction of cholera into this country lay in the laxity with which the Canadian quarantine regulations were enforced. This sentiment may have owed its origin in part to the fact that cholera made its way into the United States in 1837 by way of Quebec, but be this as it may, until within a comparatively short time the Canadian government has betrayed a remarkable lack of care or apprehension in its exposed condition in the face of a possible, if not probable, approach to its shores of this dreaded scourge. This attitude on the part of our Northern neighbor is used not a little uneasiness among Americans, and especially those residing near the Canadian boundary.

The Canadian authorities have now given assurance, however, that they will cordially co-operate with our own in all measures deemed necessary to prevent the introduction of cholera. They announce that vigilant surveillance is being maintained at Halifax over all immigrants arriving at the port, and judging from the news despatches from that port the statement is made in good faith. There appears to be a conflict between the Canadian government and the city of Halifax which has resulted in a deadlock. The city insists that immigrants must be disinfected at quarantine grounds, where arrangements are not yet completed, the dilatoriness of the government. The port health officer wants them brought up to the city for disinfection. The mayor has warned the steamship agents and the port officers that he will prevent immigrants from landing until fumigated, if it takes the whole police force of the city and special constables to do so. The government is fitting up barges with arrangements for fumigating purposes and the present difficulty will undoubtedly be obviated.

In addition to the precautions taken at Halifax the Canadian government has established a well-equipped quarantine at Green Isle in the St. Lawrence, a short distance below Quebec, and it has invited the United States Surgeon-General to station an officer at Grosse Isle, to observe the methods of examination, fumigation, etc., employed by the Canadian quarantine officials, so that he may give a satisfactory certificate to immigrants sending to enter the United States from Canada. This will do much to make Americans feel secure in relation to the character of the cholera precautions which are being taken by the government, for while direct immigration into the Dominion is by the way of Halifax, there is always a large inward movement by way of the St. Lawrence in summer.

While the Canadian government is thus guarding the introduction of cholera by immigrants it seems to be up to its old tricks in dealing with suspects who have made their way into the Dominion. For instance, a number of attempts have been made to smuggle into the United States from Canada one of the 400 immigrants from cholera infected Hamburg, who landed at Halifax a week or so ago, and customs officers at Fort Erie in Canada, just across the river from Buffalo in Canada, have gotten themselves in hot water. When the first attempt was made to bring this immigrant, Julius Scheke, over by way of the International bridge, the United States customs officers sent him back. The next morning before daylight he was sent over in a rowboat. The officers heard of this, and finding him at the house of a relative, John Briske, reported him.

It was suspected that Customs Officer House of Canada was implicated in the smuggling, and this suspicion became a certainty when Briske confessed that he had come to Buffalo and informed him that Scheke would be brought over. Another attempt was made later to bring Scheke in this country by way of the ferryboat which runs between Buffalo and Erie. The captain had been instructed by the health and immigrant officers to keep a sharp lookout for immigrants. Late in the afternoon Capt. Newman discovered Scheke aboard his boat disguised, and ordered him ashore. Then a Canadian officer named O'Malley ordered him back again and attempted to bulldoze Newman into taking the immigrant across. The captain was firm, however, and Scheke did not come.

Instances of this kind show how great is the interest of the United States in having strict quarantine kept by the Canadian government at Atlantic ports; for if immigrants suspected of having been exposed to the scourge make their way into the interior they are almost certain to be shipped to this country. This is one of the ways which our Canadian cousins have of exhibiting that love for America which impels them to seek annexation.—Free Press.

LITERARY NOTES.

—The May New England Magazine contains a paper describing the relations of "Phillips Brooks and Harvard University," written by Alexander McKenzie, an old friend of Brooks's. The article is accompanied with illustrations, which show the familiar haunts of Brooks while at Cambridge. A paper on "Milton as an Educator" by Phillips Brooks is also in this number.

—Harper's Weekly, published May 3, will be largely devoted to the illustration of the great naval review at New York. Occupying the front page will be a characteristic picture of a striking naval incident drawn by T. de Thulstrup. A double page illustration will present a view of the fleet as it appeared at the time of the review, while a superb eight-page supplement will illustrate the passage of the vessels from the bay to their anchorage in the North river. Other scenes and incidents of that occasion will be appropriately illustrated. The number will also contain an attractive miscellany of timely articles on other subjects of current interest.

—A Conan Doyle's new novel, "The Refugees," now running in Harper's Magazine, is attracting much attention on both sides of the Atlantic. The publishers' Circular, London, says, "It is one of the few really successful tales that have appeared since the days of Scott."

NEWS AND NOTES.

—Visitors to the British flagship Blake have noted with some surprise that regularly every day at noon a ration of "grog" is served out to her five hundred sailors. This ancient custom, it seems, is still maintained in the British Navy, though it was abolished in the American service many years ago. Yankee men-of-war men do not seem to have suffered by it, either, if the series of international boat races counts for anything. They have won every contest in which they have entered, and once or twice their grog-drinking British cousins have brought up the rear of the procession.

—Another movement has been started for the division of the State of Texas. If the Lone Star State really desires, however, to cut as much of a figure in our National affairs as the little State of Vermont it should seek to consolidate with some of its neighbors and get more big men within its confines.

Doesn't "look" as she ought—the weak, nervous and ailing woman. As long as she suffers from the aches, pains, and derangements peculiar to her sex, she can't expect to.

But there's only herself to blame. With Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she's a different woman. And it's a change that can be seen as well as felt. The system is invigorated, the blood enriched, digestion improved, melancholy and nervousness dispelled.

With the "Favorite Prescription," all the proper functions are restored to healthy action. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It's the only medicine for woman's weaknesses and ailments that's guaranteed to do what is claimed for it. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, the money is returned.

Can something else be offered by the dealer, though it may pay him better, be "just as good"?
